Japan decided that fans from abroad cannot come to this year's Olympics in Tokyo. Japan postponed the games from 2020 to Summer 2021 because the coronavirus pandemic started, and people could not travel. Since last year, the situation got better, but there are new mutations of the virus and they are more dangerous. The Japanese government worries that foreigners could bring these mutations to Japan. 77% of Japanese people think that fans from abroad should not come to Japan this summer.

The idea of video calling started in the late 19th century; however, the technology became available to the public only later. In 1955, an American company invented Television-Phone, and they called it 'the telephone of tomorrow'. The screen was 25 centimeters wide and two people could see each other while calling. Scientists developed much better technologies in the 1980s and 1990s, but they were very expensive. In the 1990s, it became possible to use the Internet for video calling and people started to use the technology normally.

An ex-Facebook boss said social media is harmful to our society. His job was to increase Facebook's users, but then he felt bad about getting more people to use social media. He said social media are destroying society. Twenty years ago people talked to each other. Today, they message instead of talking. People worry too much about what others think. They post photos and want everyone to like them. He also thinks fake news is affecting how we see the world, because a lot of facts that are not true give us wrong ideas.
